INVITING VENEER

Give your décor stately and timeless appeal with the stunning veneered Melchior Dining Tables. Danish teak furniture pieces from the 1950s that are still in perfect shape are crafted with veneer, which proves the quality and durability of well-made veneered furniture.

Veneer consists of thin slices of wood that are glued onto solid panels. Each wood slice has a distinctive grain, depending on the type of tree used. Like the herringbone pattern of the brown Melchior Dining Table shows, veneers are also great for marquetry.

The art of veneering dates back to ancient Egypt where sarcophagi were made from rare and precious wood veneer. High-quality veneer lasts longer than solid wood that warps or tears over time. Therefore veneered work was also very popular in the Roman Empire.
